

FACT

VS.

FICTION

Can you guess which of these statements are true about the Academic Honor Policy?

1 FSU STUDENTS...

Say that they are 65% more likely to cheat while taking a quiz or exam online

2 GROUP WORK...

Is always allowed according to the Academic Honor Policy; consultation and collaboration can never be violations

3 YOU HAVE...

Three options when deciding how to handle an accusation that you violated the Academic Honor Policy

4 ONLY FACULTY...

Had the opportunity to vote to approve the Academic Honor Policy; students didn't have a voice

LET'S SEE HOW WELL YOU DID!

Flip to the back page to check your answers & learn more

FACT VS. FICTION

Time to see what's true about the Academic Honor Policy:

1

TRUE

FSU students do self-report that online learning increases their likelihood to cheat by 65% (face-to-face was only 2%)

To enhance accountability, FSU uses Honorlock to proctor online exams

2

FALSE

Actually, any collaboration or group work that is not specifically approved by your professor could lead to a violation

We highly recommend asking your professor for clarification if you are confused about group work and collaboration policies

3

TRUE

Your choices include talking with your professor to accept the charges, accepting the charges but contesting the punishment, or denying the charges and proceeding to a violation hearing

The Quick Reference Guide and Flowchart outline what happens depending on your choice; students with prior violations must attend an Academic Honor Policy Hearing

4

FALSE

Anytime the Academic Honor Policy is revised, your peer representatives in the Department of Student Governance & Advocacy (SGA) get to vote on the content

Interested in serving with SGA or staying aware of their legislation? Visit this link to their website

THE OFFICE OF FACULTY DEVELOPMENT & ADVANCEMENT CARES ABOUT YOUR SUCCESS!

Embrace Responsible Freedom...Learn with Integrity

Academic Honor Policy Committee at: <http://fda.fsu.edu/Academics/Academic-Honor-Policy>

Office of the Vice President for Faculty Development & Advancement