FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY

This message to all students has been approved by Provost and Executive Vice President for Academic Affairs Jim Clark.

In a few short weeks, the Fall 2022 term will begin at Florida State University! We hope you are as excited as we are for the new academic year. As we prepare for the start of classes on Monday, August 22, we wanted to share a few important tips and reminders for you:

- Most of our classes at FSU are offered in person. If you are enrolled in an in-person class, it is our expectation that you will attend class unless you have a situation that warrants an excused absence. To embrace the full FSU experience and engage with your faculty and classmates, you need to attend and fully participate in your classes.
- We also encourage you to get out on campus and interact with your faculty and fellow students in person. Attend faculty office hours, sit down with your academic advisor, visit various resources and offices on campus, and participate in events. Did you know FSU has a new Student Union that will debut in the Fall? We encourage you to make this new space part of your campus adventures!
- If you are enrolled in an in-person class and experience a personal or family crisis that takes you away from campus, please know that faculty do not have the authority to switch the class to an online format for you. Instead, you will need to work with your Academic Dean's office and Case Management Services to determine your options.
- Please be aware of the Academic Calendar for Fall 2022 and plan any personal events and trips around this calendar so you do not miss class unnecessarily.
- As you prepare for the Fall term, check out the variety of activities that are being offered during Welcome FSU.

The vibrancy of our educational community depends on you and your engagement. Following this guidance will enhance your experience at FSU and ensure that you have a successful semester. We can't wait to welcome you to campus soon!
